The first of these is the fact that the population of the world is increasing at a rapid rate. This is due to a number of factors, including the fact that the birth rate is higher than the death rate in many parts of the world. This is particularly true in the developing countries, where the birth rate is often as high as 40 per 1,000 per year, while the death rate is only about 10 per 1,000 per year. This results in a rapid increase in the population of these countries.
The second factor is the fact that the life expectancy is increasing in many parts of the world. This is due to a number of factors, including the fact that medical advances have led to a decrease in the mortality rate from many diseases. This has resulted in an increase in the average length of life, which has led to an increase in the population.
The third factor is the fact that the death rate is decreasing in many parts of the world.
This is due to a number of factors, including the fact that the death rate from many diseases has decreased. This has resulted in a decrease in the overall death rate, which has led to an increase in the population.
